

Upland trustees adopt school boundary changes

The Upland school board has adopted several minor boundary changes for September to combat the district's trend in recent years of gaining students in the north while the school-aged population declines in the south.

No students currently live in three areas between 20th and 23rd streets east of Mountain Avenue.

As homes are built and occupied in the areas, students will be bused south to Baldy View School. The land was previously part of the Valencia School attendance area.

A tract currently under development on the north side of 21st Street east of O'Malley Avenue is now included in the Baldy View attendance area.

The board approved these changes and two others affecting attendance areas of Pioneer and Upland junior high schools at its meeting April 17.

Trustee Robert Ellis cast the only vote against the changes, repeating objections to what he termed the district's "postage stamp" approach to boundary changes.

Ellis suggested the board needs to look at the district as a whole for boundary changes that would lead to more neighborhood attendance areas.

Bill May, assistant superintendent for business services, responded that the administration started with the approach Ellis called for, but said administrators could find no way to maintain neighborhood school attendance with the district's current school sites.

Classroom space is lacking north of Foothill Boulevard while seats are available in the southern part of the district, causing the most recent shifts in district attendance boundaries.

Overall, district enrollment is holding fairly steady at just under 6,000 students.

Superintendent George Renworth said the district could draw attendance boundaries for its nine elementary and two junior high schools in manner that would "look more efficient," but still end up busing children south.

Since enrollment increases have been minimal — the district is forecasting a maximum of 22 students more in September — Renworth said the administration has tried to keep boundary changes slight.

In one of the changes for the junior high schools, students from an area between 14th and 15th streets west of Campus Avenue and east of Fifth Avenue will attend Pioneer Junior High beginning in September.

There are currently no sixth-graders living in the area, but May noted the change would keep pupils attending Sierra Vista School from being split from their friends by going to Upland Junior High instead of Pioneer.

The other junior high school attendance change moves the boundary for Upland Junior High a few blocks east to the west side of Mountain Avenue between Foothill and 16th Street.

Fifteen sixth-graders currently live in the area, which now coincides with the boundary for Upland students who attend Montclair High School.

Current seventh-graders in both the junior high boundary change areas have the option of completing junior high at their current schools.

The boundary change to Mountain Avenue prompted objections by one resident of the areas. Leland May noted Pioneer is closer to students who will be bused to Upland Junior High.

He also pointed out that the area is subject to a lot of shifting of students. Students living within a few blocks of Upland High School wind up being bused to Montclair High, he added.

May indicated the children of newer residents of the district should be bused instead of his, noting that he has lived in Upland 24 years.

Renworth pointed out the district has no control over busing to Montclair High, which is in the Chaffey Joint Union High School District.

Bill May of the district noted some parents from the area objected last year when busing to Pioneer was cut back and that the change would at least provide those children with transportation.

Storytime in two languages

Storyteller Josie Mata reads to preschoolers at Los Olivos recreation building, 1200 N. Campus Ave., Upland, during a weekly presentation sponsored jointly by the Ontario-Upland Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) and the Friends of the Upland Library. The program aims to broaden and develop the English vocabulary of the Spanish-speaking children and to introduce them to the library and its resources. Activities include stories in both English and Spanish, puppets, flannel board illustrations and crafts. Supplementing funds raised by the sponsoring organizations are 100 books for preschoolers collected by Brownie Troop 1210. The troop leader, Sheila Graham, is a member of the AAUW. (Staff photo)

Upland solves thorny restroom problem so restaurant can open

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The Upland City Council has cleared the way for a pizza restaurant to open on schedule after its second round of discussions this week over some thorny problems involving access to two restrooms.

Council members reversed the course taken Monday night and amended a provision of a conditional-use permit for Pizza Chalet at the Uptown and Country Shopping Center, southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Foothill Boulevard.

Neither the landlord, Mutual Savings and Loan Association, nor the tenant, Pizza Chalet, were represented Monday night.

Mayor George Gibson called for the special council session Friday after hearing that without a solution to the restroom question the pizza restaurant owners faced a delayed opening or loss of their investment.

On Friday, the three-sided discussion was complete. The principals were:

— Mutual Savings and Loan, which has guaranteed access to the restaurant's two restrooms to other tenants of the shopping center and refused to allow walling off outside doors to the restrooms as required in the permit.

— Pizza Chalet, whose owners want to open in three or four weeks and could neither go against the wishes of the landlord nor violate the city's conditional-use permit.

— City council members, who expressed concerns over the security of rear access to the restrooms in a relatively isolated part of the shopping center.

In addition to the possibility of attack on the outside, the council indicated inside and outside access to the restrooms could reduce Pizza Chalet's number of cash customers.

Councilman Bill Bottin said Monday the restaurant "may be the best place in town to eat — you can get out without paying your bill."

In the compromise reached Friday, the council, with Bottin dissenting, allowed the outside doors to remain as long as the landlord and tenant worked out security arrangements acceptable to the city.

Don Frisbie of Pizza Chalet Corp. pointed out that the pizza restaurant would be opened later than the other eight tenants of the shopping center and that employees would arrive in time to allow inside access to restrooms at 9 a.m.

He added that access to the restrooms from the front of the restaurant was easier than from the rear for other tenants anyway.

City Attorney Donald Maroney noted the city could stipulate there be no outside access to the restrooms at night and no daytime access from the rear after certain hours.

John Armetta, senior vice president of Mutual Savings and Loan, agreed that a solution could be found with the appropriate locks provided and other measures as long as other tenants would have access to the restrooms in the morning.

He noted plans initially called for separate restrooms, with access only from the inside, for each of the nine tenants (at that time it was not known a restaurant would be one of the tenants).

But that idea was thwarted by a building regulation requiring calling for two restrooms for each business with four or more employees, if the employees included both men and women.

As an alternative to providing 18 restrooms in 12,000 square feet, Armetta said, the center chose to meet building regulations by placing two restrooms at each of the center's two buildings. One set turned out to be the restaurant's restrooms.

Councilwoman Ina Petokas called for the building and police departments to review exterior access to restrooms at commercial sites.

Bottin voted against amending the conditional-use permit and other council members indicated they were not wholly satisfied.

Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy commented, "It looks like we've created a monster here and we're stuck with it."

Hypnosis

Upland police add aid to investigations

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The Upland Police Department has joined a growing number of law enforcement agencies to add hypnosis as an aid to criminal investigations.

Detective Walter Ciszek recently completed a four-day course from the Law Enforcement Hypnosis Institute Inc. in Los Angeles, where law enforcement officials from across the United States were attracted to the class.

Ciszek and Police Chief Coy Estes said more and more law enforcement agencies are turning to hypnosis training to have an in-house expert available for questioning some victims and witnesses of crimes.

Both police officials said hypnosis is useful in getting victims and witnesses to recall facts otherwise blocked inside their minds, but also stressed limits on the department's use of hypnosis.

Ciszek — who completed his training in March and has not used his new skill yet on the job — said hypnosis is "not a panacea for solving crimes."

He noted a person can lie or make mistakes while under hypnosis and added that information obtained requires corroboration before being admissible as evidence.

Estes pointed out the department will not use hypnosis on criminal suspects, saying evidence obtained would be inadmissible, or anyone unwilling to be hypnotized.

A subject must be willing in order to be hypnotized anyway, Ciszek added.

The detective also said he will not use hypnosis in the cases he investigates. Persons under hypnosis are more open to suggestion and the investigating officer doubling as a hypnotist is more apt to become personally involved in the case, perhaps prompting leading questions, he explained.

Interviews during hypnosis are taped and leading questions could result in evidence being thrown out of court, Ciszek said.

Limitations aside, Ciszek is a believer in the value of hypnosis in criminal investigations. He described himself as "skeptical at first" about the hypnosis institute, but said the class "really opened my eyes."

Estes called hypnosis another "investigative tool" and estimated the department may use it 10 to 12 times a year. He said he sees hypnosis as valuable in instances when the crime has been a traumatic experience for someone, such as a rape victim.

A key in such cases is getting the victim or witness to recall details of the crime, such as description of the vehicle and the suspect, without reliving the crime itself, Ciszek said.

He said he would not attempt questioning under hypnosis if the investigating officer tells him the victim or witness is "hyper or has a history of mental illnesses." If hypnosis is vital to the investigation, a doctor can do it, he said.

Ciszek also said he could have a psychologist or psychiatrist sit in on the questioning when he is leery of possibly upsetting a victim or witness. He noted Upland psychologist Howard Schuman has indicated his willingness to assist in such cases.

At $395 for sending Ciszek through the training, Estes said, "I feel that it's cost effective."

He noted that with Ciszek on call Upland police will not have to rely on the availability of hypnosis-trained officers from other agencies or outside professionals receiving fees.

Estes said Ciszek's services have been made available to other local police departments.

The police chief said his interest in hypnosis as an investigative tool was sparked earlier this year when the victim of a rape was unable to provide much information about the criminal or his vehicle.

In that case, Pomona Detective Archie Johnson used hypnosis to assist Upland police in obtaining a description of the car, including its license number and the fact that the plates were out of state.

Ciszek said his queries to 13 or 14 other states failed to turn up a vehicle, but noted hypnosis gave police something new to go on. The example also points out the need for corroboration of information from hypnosis, he added.

Johnson and Detective Ernie Allsup of the Pomona Police Department have used hypnosis as an investigative tool for more than a year. Both said hypnosis has been useful in getting more detailed information.

In addition to Upland and other area police departments, Johnson noted his skill as a hypnotist has been called upon by a Superior Court and the FBI.

Neither Pomona detective said they have ever brought a psychologist or psychiatrist to a hypnosis questioning session, and both stressed that the hypnotist has enough control over the subject to lead thoughts away from trauma of a crime if signs of fright are shown.

Upland trustees reject private school

By GWEN KELLEY
Staff Writer

The Upland school board has rejected two private summer school proposals offered to fill the void left by cuts in state funded summer programs.

In a 3-2 decision, the trustees supported the principle of offering equal educational opportunities to all area students. With both the American Learning Corp. and area students. With both the American Learning Corp. and the University of La Verne summer school programs, tuition ranging between $70 to $144 would have been required.

Trustees Barry Brandt and William Rugg favored a summer school program. "It would be a form of reverse discrimination if we don't offer it," said Rugg during the discussion.

Brandt, president of the board, said if the program had to please everyone, there would be no program. Using one of the offered programs would be, according to Brandt, "making the best of an unfortunate situation."

Trustee Dale Andersen pointed out that the poor of the community's poor are the ones who need summer school most. "If we go ahead and contract, it would be like adding fuel to the fire," Andersen said that the rich can always afford summer programs. If one of the proposals passed, it would begin the destruction of the public education system, he claimed.

Trustee Dina Hunter said she had mixed feelings about the principles involved. "I don't want to inhibit those who could pay," she said, adding that some avenue should be found to get students who could not afford it into the program.

Another opposing opinion to the summer school programs was offered by Superintendent George Renworth. He recommended that the board not contract summer school programs this year in hopes of restoring a state-funded summer session in the future.

"The state of California has a responsibility to provide summer school programs," Renworth said.

The Ontario-Montclair school board has adopted the American Learning Corp.'s private summer school proposal and the program will be open to Upland students.

The ALC curriculum includes reading, writing, mathematics and fine arts. The four-hour a day, 24-day program has a tuition fee of $144, per student.

St. Joseph's School in Upland will stage its second annual Spring Fashion Show and Luncheon, "Fiesta Fashions," on Saturday. Proceeds will go directly to help defray costs at the school. Women's fashions from Gene's in the Montclair Plaza, children's clothing from Teaka's Teens and the Magic Cradle in Claremont, and men's styles from Miller's Outpost in Upland will be modeled. Counting tickets for the event are, from left: Claudine Prata, 14, The Rev. John Slattery and Robert Ault, 12, at the school. Nancie Persinger, chairman, invites interested persons to call 982-3258 for tickets. (Staff photo)

Local student to be Olympic torch runner

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Bonny Warner of Mt. Baldy, a senior at Chaffey High School, will be a torch runner just before the opening of the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N. Y.

She will represent California along with one representative from each of the other 49 states, one from Washington, D. C., and one from Lake Placid.

Miss Warner said the race will cover 1,000 miles from Langley Air Force Base in Virginia north to the Olympic Stadium in Lake Placid where the huge Olympic torch will burn over the competitive activities.

The flame will be brought from Athens, Greece, in a miner's lamp in an Air Force jet to Langley Air Force Base. The flame will be taken from the Olympic Torch which has been burning in Athens since the 1896 games there. The flame is the symbol of peace and friendship.

On Feb. 1, the first of 52 runners will light a torch from the miner's lamp flame. This torch will be carried in turns over the next nine days by the runners to Lake Placid.

Miss Warner admitted some of the finer details have not been supplied to her, but she believes the runners will carry the torch for three miles each, over and over, averaging about 30 miles each in the entire run.

A bus, she said, will be provided for those not running as it follows the torch bearer of each three-mile segment.

"When we went into Los Angeles for the interviews," Miss Warner said, "we were bused to the coliseum then each of us carried the torch and ran around the coliseum and in and out of the gardens."

"That torch is HEAVY," she said. "It must weigh 20 pounds. It's brass and about 2 1/2 feet high and has a leather handle."

Miss Warner learned about the torch bearers' competition by reading a small application in a runners' magazine. She filled in the application and sent it in, then she had to write essays on "How Do You Think You Embody the Olympic Spirit," "What Do You Think the Responsibilities of a Torch Runner Are" and "How Do You Think You Represent Whole Man." Each required 150 words or less.

For the first essay, Miss Warner said, "I wrote that I'm competitive and I have a lot of drive and that the Olympics are for youths — and I'm a youth."

As for responsibilities of a runner, Miss Warner said she wrote that she would have to represent her state to Lake Placid and also represent Lake Placid to her state and "be a representative of the United States to the world."

When it came to the third essay, she said, "Oh, gee, I'm not a man, but I figure the Bible says woman is part of man and I'm an old child and a young adult."

In January, the Mt. Baldy girl was notified of the interviews to be held in Los Angeles. After the running with the torch, there were personal interviews. She said there were representatives of Utah, Arizona, Nevada, California and Oregon there. Other interviews were being held in other states — and the end result was 260 individuals were chosen out of 6,000 entries for interviews.

On April Fool's Day, Bonny Warner received a call from the torch committee director David Gershon in Lake Placid to tell her she had been selected to represent California.

Of the 52 runners, 26 men and 26 women ranging in ages from 15 to 56 were chosen.

Miss Warner firmly believes her experiences as a senior scout of Claremont Troop 111 of the Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council are responsible for her selection.

"I told them about my experiences last summer in a survival camping situation on an island in Lake Michigan and group dynamic games — and I think I might have been chosen because of this — good old Girl Scouts!" she said.

Miss Warner is an avid field hockey player, carries a 3.9 grade average, enters Stanford University in the fall to major in environmental engineering, is involved with photography as a hobby and income source and recently has taken a job at McDonald's in Upland.

"I have to save money since I'm responsible for my air fare to Lake Placid this summer (orientation for the torch runners) and when I go east to start the run to Lake Placid," she said.

After the torch runners reach their destination on Feb. 9, one will be selected to run up the steps to light the big torch signaling the start of the 1980 Winter Olympics on Feb. 10. Afterward, each of the runners will be involved in lighting torches before the 39 various events.

Until her July trip to Lake Placid, there are details Miss Warner is waiting to learn — and she's also wondering how Stanford University will react to her taking off a month from her studies.

Red Cross appeals for donations

Agency's disaster fund depleted

By RITA BUSBY
Staff Writer

San Bernardino County Red Cross officials, together with chapters throughout Southern California, are appealing for donations to replenish disaster funds depleted by floods and tornados in 11 Southern states. In addition to the weather-related disasters, the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania has boosted the cost of aid to more than $5.3 million — almost wiping out the organization's 1978-79 disaster relief budget. H. Raymond Owen, San Bernardino County chapter executive director, said chapters within the affected states have been asked to contribute an additional $1.5 million above their regular previously budgeted disaster funds.

Cities and communities outside the flooded areas also have been asked to come up with another $1.5 million, according to Owen. Thirty eight cents out of every San Bernardino County United Way dollar channeled to the Red Cross goes to national headquarters. Of that amount, said Owen, a good portion goes into the national disaster relief fund.

The additional requested funds will shore up the organization's depleted budget for the remaining two months of the fiscal year ending June 30.

Owen said under normal conditions the Red Cross wouldn't make an extra appeal for money because it is supportive of the United Way, "but this appeal is very dramatic and needed."

At the present time there are more than 36 Red Cross shelters open in nine states housing more than 2,400 people.

Thirteen volunteers and staff members from Southern California and Las Vegas are among the 310 disaster specialists assigned to assist at the disaster locations.

As of Wednesday, relief activities were continuing in Texas and Oklahoma due to tornados and in Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas and Georgia due to floods.

Owen said teams are just beginning to go into Louisiana because of floods moving in that direction.

Persons wishing to donate to the disaster fund can earmark checks to specific areas of the country hit by disasters, according to Owen.

Additionally, inquiries about conditions in those areas can be made at San Bernardino County chapters.

Chapters serving the West End are located at 209 I St., Ontario, and at 670 Arrowhead Ave., San Bernardino.

Trustee at Chaffey plans to resign post

By DONALD J. NEWMAN
Staff Writer

The Chaffey College Board of Education is discreetly searching for a replacement to fill a vacancy expected to be created by the resignation of college Vice President Kenneth Ketner.

Ketner, who has not officially resigned, confirmed he will be leaving the board, presumably before Aug. 31.

"I will be moving from the district," Ketner said, explaining that his company will be completing a move to Newport Beach sometime this month.

A "definite time frame has not been set yet," continued Ketner, who said he will wait for his family to relocate before following them.

His house has been sold, he said, and escrow is expected to close by the end of August. But until he moves, "I will remain on the board."

Ketner has two years remaining in his first four-year term but the appointment will end in November when the seat will probably be filled by an election, according to board President Lester Stroth.

He said the board would like to fill the temporary vacancy with a person from the Chino area to "distribute the representation a little better."

He said he thinks it would be appropriate to appoint a Mexican-American citizen to provide more

"balance" to the governing body. The only newspaper to be notified of the impending vacancy was a newspaper in Chino. Stroth said he called the publisher there to see if he had any suggestions about a possible appointment.

That paper "was not notified in any official way," said Stroth, when asked why the information was not more widely disseminated. It was the publisher's prerogative to publish the information as news, he continued.

Stroth said he did not know when the appointment would be made because Ketner's resignation was still in the air.

"It would depend on when he resigns," Stroth said.

The board must either call an election or make a provisional appointment within 30 days of the resignation. If an appointment is made, voters have 30 days in which to file a petition to block the selection.

The petition must contain the names of 5 percent of the district's voters.

Anyone interested in being considered for the vacancy should either contact the San Bernardino Superintendent of Schools or write to Stroth at 540 W. 25th Street, Upland, 91786. A carbon copy of the letter should be sent to the college.

Lloyd hits pilot retirement

Congressmobile to stop at West End locations this month

Rep. Jim Lloyd's mobile field office, the Congressmobile, will visit the following communities in the 35th Congressional District in May. The mobile field office will be at each location from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

— Chino, May 9, in the parking lot of the county branch library, 13180 Central Ave.

— Claremont, May 10, across from city hall, 207 Harvard Ave.

— Ontario, May 16, at Bon View Community Center, 1010 S. Bon View Ave.

— Montclair, May 17, in front of the north entrance of Montclair Plaza.

— Rancho Cucamonga, May 24, at Perry's Market, 9477 Foothill Blvd.

Rep. Jim Lloyd

Rep. Lloyd has a new cause to champion, that of the aging airline pilot.

Lloyd, D-35th District, says he will sponsor a bill to overturn a Federal Aviation Administration rule compelling pilots to retire at 60. Lloyd said, "The irony of the situation is the pilot of an airliner may be 59 1/2 years old, blind in one eye and a reformed alcoholic. He may have had cancer, be 50 pounds overweight and be a five-pack-a-day smoker. But once the pilot passes his 60th birthday, even if he has 20-20 vision, can run a marathon and hasn't been sick in years, the FAA says he is such a risk that no tests exist which are sure enough to keep him in the pilot's chair."

Dominic DeFrank, 9, and Mara Karic, 9, third-graders at St. Joseph's School in Upland, outline some ideas for the Upland Chamber of Commerce "Ecology Begins at Home" poster contest in conjunction with the declaration of May as Ecology Month in Upland. The poster contest began Tuesday. The posters will be judged May 10 and then displayed in stores, banks and offices in Upland. Sixty first-, second- and third-place winners will be picked from the 700 expected entries. (Staff photo)

Competitions for mentally retarded

Kiwanis host Special Olympics

Thirteen Kiwanis clubs will sponsor the Chaffey-Ontario Area Special Olympics Games to be held May 5.

The event will be held at the Chaffey College athletic field in Rancho Cucamonga. Nearly 400 participants are expected to take part.

Events scheduled include the 50-meter dash; 200-meter dash; 400-meter dash; 400-meter relay; soft ball throw; standing broad jump; high jump; Frisbee throw; basketball tournament; swimming.

The Special Olympics is an international program of sports training and athletic competition for mentally retarded people. Participants range from 10 to 65 years of age. Each event is classified by age and skill level. Selected participants will advance to the state Special Olympics games to be held this summer in Los Angeles.

Several celebrities, sports figures and local officials are expected to attend this year's games.

Additional information on the event can be obtained from Terry Lane, Kiwanis public relations chairman, at 981-5602, or by writing to the Kiwanis Sponsored Special Olympics Games, 1046 Sullivan St., Upland, 91786.

'An Afternoon With Sam Maloof'

"Enjoy an Afternoon with Sam Maloof" will be held Saturday, May 5, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the furniture designer's home and workshop, 9553 Highland Ave., Alta Loma.

The open house is being sponsored by the Newport Beach Chapter of the Forest Home Women's Auxiliary. The auxiliary supports the ministry of the Forest Home Christian Conference Center located in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Maloof is an internationally renowned furniture designer and master craftsman. He has received many awards and his furniture is in museum collections throughout the United States including 12 pieces at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. He also has a drafting table in the Vatican Museum, Rome, Italy.

Information and reservations may be made by calling 642-3512 or 644-2129.

Changes reduce population densities

Revised county plan questioned

By PETER WONG
Staff Writer

The county planning department has been accused of making changes to the revised general plan without adequate public notice and without the full knowledge of the planning commission and the board of supervisors.

Most of the changes would reduce the population densities that would be allowed in a number of unincorporated areas. Planning Director Kenneth C. Topping said those changes have been largely misunderstood.

The accusation was made as the board of supervisors ended the first round of public hearings on the plan. The plan's policies will guide land use in the nation's largest county for the next 20 years.

The plan was returned to the county planning commission, which has scheduled a second and final round of hearings May 31 and June 1, 7 and 8. The board of supervisors is expected to adopt a final version of the plan by June 30.

The county planning department's attempt to update and simplify a decade-old general plan has evolved into "growth control," said Jack Cummings, a vice president of the University of Redlands.

It is doing this by reducing the maximum population densities in a number of areas, he said.

The university owns land around the county and receives income from the sale of the donated parcels. It has made only one complaint about a proposed reduction in population density.

Supervisor Robert L. Hammock of San Bernardino said similar complaints have been made by members of the committee which advised the planning department about the revised plan.

He said that may endanger the committee's support for the plan.

Hammock said the planning department staff has labeled a number of the changes as "errors" when they are pointed out. But he said advisory committee members have told him, "These aren't errors. They (the staff) know exactly what is in the plan."

The committee is also concerned that changes in allowable population densities — intended or not — will undermine the planning department's credibility with the public because of inadequate notice, Hammock said.

Supervisor Dennis L. Hansberger of Yucaipa said

Banghart to be forestry chief in S.B. County

Don C. Banghart has been appointed chief of the California Department of Forestry force and fire warden in San Bernardino County.

Banghart will succeed Rex N. Griggs, who has been promoted to assistant chief of the department's Southern California region.

San Bernardino County contracts with the department for fire protection in many unincorporated communities, including San Antonio Heights.

Banghart, 38, is no stranger to the county. He was one of two assistant fire wardens for three years.

the population densities in the plan are "much more specific than I thought they would be." He said perhaps those should be left to specific plans for unincorporated communities, not a countywide plan.

Topping said the countywide plan is restrictive in a number of ways. But he said the revised plan allows for a maximum countywide population of 4,528,280, or only 76,433 less than in the present general plan. The department has estimated a countywide population of just under 1.2 million in the year 2000, compared with last year's estimated 764,798.

Furthermore, Topping said, population densities are being reduced in a number of areas only because of the way present county policies are interpreted.

Policies in the current general plan are more restrictive than what zoning indicates, he said.

Topping said those policies have been refined "so that every property owner knows what he can expect to do with his land."

Supervisor Robert O. Townsend of Chino, a former county planning commissioner, endorsed the revised plan as part of an overhauling of the county planning process.

"Sure, there are some scary things — but nothing ventured, nothing gained. If we're going to make a change for improvement, we're going to have to take a calculated risk to some degree," Townsend said.

The new system includes more detailed but flexible plans for unincorporated communities and a development code that states county standards for land use.

man James L. Mayfield of Apple Valley made comments that could undermine the supervisors' support for the proposed city-county cooperation policy for planning in certain unincorporated areas.

In most instances, that policy would commit the county to follow a city's general plan and development standards in unincorporated areas likely to fall within city boundaries.

where it says the city would agree with the county," Hansberger said. The board of supervisors would retain final decision-making authority for land uses in unincorporated areas.

Counselor says women should control their lives

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

"It's about time we women got control of our bodies and our minds and our lives," said Rebecca Herrera de Vaughn.

"I think we need to be educated and take responsibility for ourselves," added the counselor who recently opened a local center specializing in the counseling of women.

"I'm no different. I've experienced the same problems. I have the same fears as other women walking the world," she said.

"I finally had to let go and rebel in some ways for my own personal growth," she said.

The opening of the Laurel Counseling Center is the beginning fulfillment of a dream for Mrs. Vaughn, who one day envisions a complete center staffed by professionals "in tune with women's emotional and medical needs." She hopes this future center's staff would include a family practitioner, an obstetrician/gynecologist, nurses, psychologists, a psychiatrist, social workers and counselors.

In the meantime, the Laurel Counseling Center at 533 N. Laurel

Ave., Ontario, has Mrs. Vaughn, a licensed social worker, as the only full-time counselor. The three other counselors share the one-office facility on a part-time basis.

A counseling center for women is needed because so many problems are unique to the female sex, Mrs. Vaughn believes. As examples, she cited childbirth, hysterectomies, mastectomies and incest, noting that a large percentage of women are victims of molestation by some relative.

She said many women involved in incest when children end up feeling guilty and blaming themselves when they are adults.

"It's incredible what women do to themselves mentally," she said.

Although wife beating is not a new phenomena, Mrs. Vaughn believes what is new is that women are standing up for their rights. But they are doing so only now when help is available.

In contrast, Mrs. Vaughn sees the problem of the woman alcoholic as one pretty much ignored by society.

"No one is actually doing anything for them," she said. "People are barely looking at the problem. Everything seems to be designed for men," she said, referring to rehabilitation and counseling facilities for alcoholics.

"I think a lot of different professions need to be educated about women," she said.

Mrs. Vaughn also sees women very much out of control and many still playing a childhood role.

In trying to start her counseling center, Mrs. Vaughn encountered situations experienced by many women trying to achieve a goal today — discrimination and a lack of self-confidence.

"Like so many women, I didn't have the guts to do it on my own for a long time," she said. She had

"There always were people I could run to. I knew if I hung my shingle, I'd be completely responsible myself," she said.

She knew she had the ability and background to work toward her dream and finally decided to "risk it."

When she started looking for an office for her center, she was faced by sexism from prospective landlords.

"They were not about to give me a chance because I was a woman and I was starting my own business. Men had no trust or faith that I was an experienced counselor," she recalled.

Armed with a license as a clinical social worker, a master's degree from USC and her license as a registered nurse, Becky Vaughn persevered.

Before she found the current location, she almost gave up and became so discouraged that she nearly decided it wasn't meant to be.

Now the center is a reality and Mrs. Vaughn is there every day, making phone calls, setting up appointments and counseling clients, men and children as well as women.

It is part way to the fulfillment of a dream for this vivacious woman who was born in Upland and lives with her husband and two children in Ontario.

"As a youngster I really fit the women's role before the women's movement," she said. She lied to her peers about her scholastic achievements because their acceptance meant more to her.

When her father passed away, Becky Herrera was 16 and knew she would have to be the breadwinner of the family.

"The most I thought I could be was an LVN (licensed vocational nurse) for I had no time or money to be an R.N.," she recalled.

She was a nurse's aide at San Antonio Community Hospital until she obtained her LVN, then worked at the former Central Memorial Hospital in Montclair.

At this point, she decided to take enough additional courses at Chaffey College to graduate. Then, she started the R.N. program. After she obtained her bachelor of science degree in psychiatric nursing from Cal State Los Angeles, she earned her master's in social work in 1975 from USC.

Mrs. Vaughn spent 14 years in therapy work as a psychiatric nurse, first working nine years at Pomona Valley Mental Health Clinic and later with San Bernardino County. Her first job with the county was in the alcoholic out-patient clinic, then later in the locked ward at county and eventually, she went into management. Just prior to starting her counseling center, Mrs. Vaughn was clinic manager for the county continuing care services in Ontario.

She plans soon to begin work on her doctorate and specialize in women's services.

"This is the just the beginning," she said. "That's where I'm going."

In the center of the U-shaped Norton Simon Museum building is a garden area with a long pool, graced in the center, by this nude. The garden is dotted with statuary and, at the far end,

The Thinker by Rodin looks down and surveys the scene. The garden is a pleasant place to stroll, rest on the many benches or sit on the grass.

Norton Simon Museum, Pasadena

Priceless art displayed in elegant surroundings

The beautiful part about the Norton Simon Museum of Art in Pasadena is its spacious, uncluttered and unique way of displaying the paintings and sculptures.

There's every indication that the sparkling atmosphere from the shiny floors to the garden sculpture is maintained to give visitors the perfect place to view priceless art works.

It's difficult to say just where to suggest a visitor start in the museum.

The main floor has one long gallery with the magnificent works of the Italian masters, the impressionists such as Van Gogh, Monet, Matisse, and Flemish and Dutch masters, to mention a few.

At one end of the wing is an exhibit area devoted to figures. At the other end, visitors behold the gigantic Italian 18th century painting by Tiopollo, "the Triumph of Virtue and Fortitude." The ethereal mood of Works of the masters can be seen in the north wing, and at the far end is an exhibit of "Treasures of South Asian Sculpture."

From this wing, doors open into the sculpture garden centered by a long pool of water. Gracing the lawn are many pieces of sculpture, but still giving the uncluttered feeling carried over from inside the museum.

At the far end of the garden, poised on a high stand behind the fence is "The Thinker" by Rodin. He seems to be debating about the pastoral quiet of the garden before him and the constant roar of freeway traffic behind him.

The lower level of the Norton Simon has a marvelous exhibit of 19th century tulip prints done in watercolors and still vivid. The delicacy of the art work draws one to look at each, but there are so many, it would take hours of study.

There also is an extensive collection of Rembrandt prints and etchings, and soul-searching intaglios by Georges Roualt.

In another exhibit area, the sculptures of Henry Moore are displayed. These are small pieces such as a family group, a woman in a rocker and a trio of figures. Moore's works in larger-than-life-size statues are placed at the sides of the museum's front entrance.

His figures are strange with elongated bodies and weird shapes to the tiny heads. Each is thought provoking and has a definite flowing grace.

The highlight of visiting the Norton Simon Museum to this visitor is the exhibit of paintings and sculpture by the great French master, Edgar Degas (1834-1917).

Mostly known for his paintings of ballet dancers in full tutus, Degas' bronze sculptures of ballet dancers, women bathing and horses are marvelous. One could spend hours in that one area admiring the grace, the movement, the fascinating figures.

There are, of course, many of his paintings of ballet dancers and his monumental painting, "The Rape of the Sabines."

In the Degas exhibit are 88 important works by the famous Frenchman.

In the Norton Simon collection are the works of Spanish artists represented by Murillo, Zurbaran and Goya. The French are strongly represented by Manet, Cezanne, Renoir, Gauguin and Seurat. Picasso is represented by oils and currently by 200 of his lithographs.

One visit to the museum only lures art lovers back again and again. The wealth of the collections cannot be absorbed in a few visits.

The Norton Simon is located at Colorado and Orange Grove boulevards and is easily reached from the West End. Take the Foothill Freeway to Pasadena and the Orange Boulevard off-ramp.

The museum is open Thursday through Sunday from noon until 6 p.m. Admission is charged.

School of Theology names acting dean

David R. Griffin has been named acting dean of the School of Theology at Claremont while Dean Joseph C. Hough Jr. is away during 1979-80, President Richard W. Cain has announced.

Griffin is associate professor of philosophy of religion and executive director of the Center for Process Studies. Hough will spend the next academic year on research leave in Cambridge, England, exploring the ethics of land use.

Griffin, a member of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), was a graduate student of Claremont theologian John Cobb in the 60s, returning in 1973 — after teaching at the University of Dayton — to become Cobb's colleague.

Both are national authorities on the process philosophy of Alfred North Whitehead, particularly as it relates to Christian thought.

They have co-authored "Process Theology: An Introductory Exposition," a paperback that appeared in 1976 and is already out in four other languages.

Griffin has written or edited five other books. His major effort thus far is "God, Power, and Evil: A Process Theodicy." He is also the author of more than 20 journal articles, the latest being in religious ethics and liberation theology.

In connection with his work for the Center for Process Studies, he has recently co-edited the "corrected edition" of Whitehead's "Process and Reality" and is planning conferences on education, aesthetics and liberation theology.

A Jewish-Christian discussion of the problem of evil is also being planned.

Fitness program scheduled

COVINA — Donald C. Almy, the "Happy Jogger" from Hawaii, will present a fitness program Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Seventh-day Adventist Church, 1067 E. Badillo Street.

Almy began a 3,200 mile run May 1 from the Gerontology Center in Los Angeles to the Center for Aging in Washington, D.C., to encourage older citizens to exercise and improve their nutritional habits.

"Four years ago I found myself falling into a pattern like many older people," said the 67-year-old Almy. "I was overweight and my nutritional habits were poor. Exercise and a balanced diet was the answer."

He has since completed 10 26-mile marathons in Hawaii — one under four hours.

Also in Hawaii, he has lectured extensively on nutrition and exercise and now he wants to tell everyone here what he has learned from his new regimen.

Because Almy will be running only 10 to 15 miles a day, it will take him three days to reach the Covina area. His total run will last approximately 11 months and he will avoid the harsh weather by running through the southern states.

For those who need jobs

New chairman named for Mormon employment program

D. Allan Mackay has been called by the La Verne Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) to implement the church employment program. He will be working with those men and women who need jobs as well as local and national employers that need dedicated hard working individuals.

In announcing the appointment, President Robert L. McCook III said, "He (Mackay) will also assist those who need to upgrade their vocational levels and increase their economic rewards." Those communities affected by this announcement are Chino, Claremont, Diamond Bar, La Verne, Pomona and the east end of San Dimas.

Mackay, 53, has many years of experience in the employment field. He is employed by Johnston Pump Co. locally as their manager of personnel services. He is also the Mayor Pro-tem for the city of La Verne.

Mackay will also train local Ward representatives in job placement counseling. He will function in co-operation with similar specialists in other areas of Southern California. All services are offered at no cost to the employer and the employee. Inquiries should be directed to: Allan Mackay at (714) 593-8672 in La Verne.

Artists Workshop sponsors festival

By ILA WALES
Staff Writer

The Artists Workshop will sponsor an art festival Saturday and May 6 at the Upland Eldorado Mobile Home Clubhouse, 1400 W. 13th St., Upland, according to Lorraine Hundley, chairman of the annual show.

Hours are noon to 10 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Framed paintings will be sold and a painting donated by Bun-nye Rowland will be given as a door prize.

The Community Club of Cyrus J. Morris School will sponsor an art show and auction at El Prado Golf Course, 6555 Pine St., Chino. The art works can be viewed Friday from 7 to 8 p.m., with the auction beginning at 8:30 p.m. Admission is charged. An original oil painting will be given as a door prize.

The collection is offered by the Robert Sills Galleries of North Hollywood and will include original lithographs, etchings, graphics, oils and watercolors. Each work of art is framed and ready to hang. A catalog will be available and trained personnel will answer questions. Tickets must be purchased in advance from Sue Pinion, 598-4425.

Carol West, 595-7132, or Nancy Wilson, 595-5210.

Citrus College will present its annual High School Art Invitational at the college Art Gallery in Azusa Monday through May 11. The show is free and open to the public. Invited to participate are students from Azusa, Claremont, Duarte, Glendale, Glendora, Monrovia and Western Christian high schools.

An opening night reception is slated at 6:30 p.m. Monday. Art gallery hours are noon to 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday; and noon to 2 p.m., Friday.

Students of Shir Lee Geannes will display their works May 6 at the Rancho Cucamonga Community Services Building, 9161 Baseline Road, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The free show will feature works by students in the Monday evening and Tuesday morning classes at the center. Mrs. Geannes will offer summer classes at the center. Information will be available at the show or at the community services facility.

An exhibition of "The Photograph as Artifice" will be shown at the Cal Poly Pomona University library gallery through May 17. Work by 19th and 20th century photographers Ansel Adams, Edward Steichen, Henry Jackson, Aaron Siskind and Minor White are included in the exhibit. The exhibit focuses upon a variety of visual deceptions that alter the content of the picture. The library gallery is open Monday through Thursday, from 7:30 a.m. to 9:45 p.m.; Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.; Saturday from 1 to 4:45 p.m.; and Sunday from 2 to 9:45 p.m.

A collection of Chicano art will be shown at the Cal Poly Pomona University Union art gallery Wednesday through May 17. The public is invited to the opening reception for the artists, from 4 to 6 p.m. on Wednesday. The opening of the art show will mark the beginning of three days of the university's Cinco de Mayo celebration, Wednesday through Friday. Works to be displayed are by students, teachers and community artists from Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Orange counties.

A feature of the show will be sculptures by Paul Cadillo and members of the Ontario Bon View Project. The sculptures were loaned by the San Bernardino County Museum of Art. Cadillo, a former Cal Poly student now deceased, worked to unify Chicano youth.

Gallery hours are from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 6 to 8 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

The Archaeological Survey Association of Southern California will host an open house Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at its research center, 1251 Palomares Ave., La Verne. Admission is free. Reproductions of Indian rock art will be displayed at the Charles La Monk Gallery in the research center. Sand-painter David Villaseñor will demonstrate the ancient Indian craft. A number of other exhibits are also planned.

Photographs by George Hurrell will be displayed at the Riverside County Art and Cultural Center Edward-Dean Museum of Decorative Arts, Cherry Valley, from May 6 to May 27. A reception is planned May 6, from 2 to 4 p.m. Included in the exhibit are photographs of some of the most fascinating glamour stars of Hollywood movies from the 1920's to the present.

Alice Thoma completes a painting in preparation for the Artists Workshop's annual art festival Saturday and May 6 at the Upland Eldorado Mobile Home Clubhouse, 1400 W. 13th St. A number of framed paintings will be sold at the festival, which will be open from noon to 10 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. May 6.

Spring concert

The Concert Choir of Harvey Mudd, Claremont Men's, Scripps and Pitzer colleges will present its Spring Concert in Bridges Hall, Pomona College, at 8:15 p.m. May 5 and 3 p.m. May 6. Admission is free.

Under the direction of Scripps music professor Michael D. Lamkin, the choir will perform Haydn's "Lord Nelson Mass," Poulenc's "Gloria" and "A Jubilant Song" by Norman Dello Joio.

One of Haydn's most popular masses, the "Lord Nelson" reflects the classical spirit which pervaded his compositions of the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Featured soloists in the Mass are Janice McVeigh, soprano; Jane O'Donnell, mezzo - soprano; Dennis Heath, tenor; and Elwood Peterson, bass.

Poulenc's "Gloria" was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Commission and given its premiere in 1961 by the Boston Symphony. Although contemporary, the work is steeped in the traditions of the post - impressionist era. Sharon Baker, soprano, will be soloist.

Dello Joio's "A Jubilant Song" was written in 1946 to Walt Whitman's poetry. Pianist Paul Bishop is featured.

Lew Ayres film to benefit group

By VONNE ROBERTSON
Staff Writer

Actor-director Lew Ayres hopes to persuade people to be respectful of anyone searching for spiritual truth.

The former Hollywood leading man has spent more than 20 years traveling throughout the world to photograph shrines, ceremonies and leaders of the world's religions.

"Altars of the World," his Golden Globe award-winning film, will be presented in Claremont Saturday as a benefit for the Blaisdell Institute, affiliated with the Claremont Colleges.

"A variety in points of view is essential. If people are sincere, others should respect them," Ayres said during a recent visit to Claremont to attend a Blaisdell Institute dinner.

"Man is the carrier of the seed of ongoing evolution and this evolution is constantly developing," Ayres added. "In the film, we are looking at the ordeal of life as part of the necessary change to move to further advancements."

Ayres spends a great part of each year traveling to various colleges and universities, presenting films and lecturing on both religions and philosophers.

"But, I'm still an actor to quite a degree," he reported. "I play funny old characters. It's much more fun than doing straight roles."

The veteran actor says today's actors are more skilled and better trained.

"The only superstars today are those performing in television series. Formerly, movie studios had families of actors and actresses they spent millions to promote. Those days are gone," Ayres said.

While Ayres feels that many of the strict censorship codes of previous days were "absurd," he said films today tend to use swearing just for the sake of swearing.

Ayres and his wife, Diana, are parents of a son, Justin Britt, 10, the first child for either of them.

The actor-producer says his son has colored his feelings about the importance of life and about certain values.

"I wouldn't appear in a show which my son couldn't see. Also, I don't want him thinking that everyone talks only with four-letter words."

A self-educated man, Ayres said he always had the impulse to be a student.

"I've taken all types of courses and pursued knowledge in religion and philosophy. This search has consumed my life. But being self-taught leaves holes in the fabric of knowledge. This bothers me sometimes."

Ayres will present the film on the religions, which includes Hinduism, Theravada, Mahayana Buddhism, Shinto, Sikhism, Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Christianity and Islam, at 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Saturday in Garrison Theater.

He will be joined by members of the Claremont Colleges faculty for a seminar at McConnell Center Dining Hall on the Pitzer College campus from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

A luncheon is set from 1 to 2 p.m.

The public is welcome at the film, luncheon and seminar, with tickets at $12.50, or the film, with $5 admission.

Tickets and additional information may be obtained by contacting the Blaisdell Institute, 143 E. 10th St., Claremont, 621-8194.

Jane Fonda, actress and political activist, will attend a screening of the film, "A Doll's House," in a benefit for the Claremont Colleges Campaign for Economic Democracy (CED) Wednesday, May 9 at 8 p.m. in Garrison Theater, Tenth and Dartmouth, Claremont. A wine reception for Miss Fonda will be held from 7 to 8 p.m. The actress will speak on "Nuclear Energy" at 8 with the screening to follow at 8:15 p.m. For ticket information call 621-8000, extension 2106 or extension 2161.

Electronic music concert set

A concert of "Music From the Electronic Studio" will be presented at Cal State, San Bernardino Wednesday evening, May 9.

The free program will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the recital hall of the Creative Arts Building.

The concert will consist of a selection of music composed in Cal State's electronic music studio.

Nothing can replace strawberries, cream

Real whipped cream and fresh strawberries — there are no substitutes for nature's finest!
This is truly a luxurious combination of flavors and textures. Tart sweet juicy berries paired with thick, velvety rich whipping cream. It makes your mouth water just to think about it. No wonder this delectable duo has inspired some of the most luscious desserts ever created.

This cream filled berry patch pie with glazed

Here it is! The dessert which heralds the real meaning of spring — strawberries and real whipped cream. This Berry Patch Pie will have everyone sitting up to take notice when served. The berries are glazed and the cream and berries nestle on a crispy, buttery cookie crust. Calories? Sure! But once a year one has to give in to temptation.

strawberries is indeed a sparkling beauty. On sampling, you'll appreciate how beautifully the various textures are juxtaposed to make this dessert even more memorable. A smooth mixture of pureed cottage cheese and whipped cream nestles in a crisp buttery cookie crust. Then there's the topping of juicy berries with the glistening glaze both under and over. Rosettes of real whipped cream piped on last are the finishing touches.

You may prefer to soft whip the cream and spoon it on top rather than piping it on with a pastry bag and tip. This pie is a masterpiece of fresh, wholesome tastes put together superbly. For even more good natural flavor serve the pie with fresh cold milk.

Whipping cream like all fluid dairy products begins with high quality milk. The milkfat content of whipping cream and other fluid milk products are standardized. Cartons of cream designed for whipping are labeled as such. The 35 percent milkfat content in whipping cream gives it the rich full body which makes whipping possible. For best and quickest whipping results start with chilled cream, bowls and beaters. Over beating will start butter formation in whipping cream so keep an eye on what you're doing.

Whipped Cream Berry Patch Pie

- 1 quart fresh strawberries
- 1/2 cup water
- 3/4 cup sugar

- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 cup whipping cream
- 2/3 cup cottage cheese
- Few drops almond extract*
- Cookie Crust

* or 1/2 teaspoon pure vanilla extract

Wash strawberries in cold water. Drain and hull. Combine 1 cup strawberries with water, 1/2 cup sugar and lemon juice. Heat to boiling. Simmer, uncovered 1 minute. Pour into electric blender. Add cornstarch and whip until smooth. Return strawberry mixture to saucepan. Cook over medium high heat, stirring constantly until glaze boils, thickens and becomes translucent. Cool to room temperature. Combine 2/3 cup whipping cream, cottage cheese, 1/4 cup sugar and flavoring in blender whirling until smooth. Spread in bottom of baked Cookie Crust. Spoon 1 cup strawberry glaze over cheese layer. Halve remaining strawberries. Place cut side down in single layer in pie, mounding remaining strawberries in center. Cover with remaining glaze. Chill until ready to serve. Whip remaining 1/3 cup cream and garnish top of pie. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

COOKIE CRUST: Combine 1 cup flour, 3 tablespoons sugar and pinch of salt. Cut in 6 tablespoons butter to get fine moist crumbs. Press lightly into bottom and sides of 9-inch pie plate, making bottom slightly thicker than sides. Bake in 450 degree oven 10 minutes or until light golden brown. Cool.

Spinning yarns is no tall tale for hobbyist who owns 12 wheels

By CRAIG MACDONALD
Copley News Service

Lemuel Dilley has always been interested in wheels. And, he's willing to spin a yarn or two about them.

"I've always liked wheels and spinning wheels in particular, since they have been used for hundreds of years," said the retired electronic technician. "But, when I'd stop at a museum to find out about them, the only thing I discovered was that the curator never seemed to know much."

Then, in 1975, Dilley drove past a farm in Piqua, Ohio, and discovered a middle-aged woman spinning (making threads by twisting together plant fibers).

"I learned more from watching her than I did from written material," said the Santee resident.

In a nearby town, Dilley saw a broken down spinning wheel that was for sale. But, he was on a 4,000 mile automobile trip and decided not to cart it around.

When he got back to Santee, he wrote a letter to the Ohio shop owner who had offered the wheel for sale. To his disappointment it had been sold.

"Then I decided to try and make one myself," Dilley said.

He found a wheel (22 inches in diameter) that had been turned into a lamp, purchased it and set out to make the contraption functional.

"All it had was a wheel and legs. Out of maple, I made a table, and out of steel I formed a spindle and axle," Dilley explained.

The result was a functional spinning wheel that won him first place in a county art show. Dilley also used it to make yarn with.

"I spun yarn from wool, cotton and dog hair, and later made scarves out of it," he said.

Dilley said anyone with a mechanical talent can make functional spinning wheels.

"And, its great for senior citizens — not only to keep them busy doing worthwhile things but in fighting back arthritis," he said. "I have a little arthritis in my hands and arms, and spinning has really helped deter it."

Dilley's son and granddaughter also spin on wheels he has made.

In three years, Dilley has produced 12 spinning wheels — ranging from 11 inches in diameter to 48 inches.

"You learn how to make wheels and to spin on them through practical experience," he said. "It teaches you to be a craftsman, carpenter, blacksmith and painter."

The construction process involves sawing, sanding, gluing, staining, drilling holes as well as lathe work (since the spindle and axle are made out of steel).

The wheel consists of eight wooden rim segments, eight spokes and one hub. He usually uses birch, maple or white oak in the process.

Sometimes, Dilley spends up to 12 hours a day working on wheels — "and if I want to, I can make one in a week."

This elongated sculpture of a woman is currently in the entrance gallery of the Norton Simon Museum, Pasadena. The museum is spacious, uncluttered and holds treasures of art beyond belief. There are statues, priceless paintings and prints. There is no way the vast collections can be viewed in one visit as one should return again and again to absorb the beauty displayed. The museum is open Thursday through Sunday from noon until 6 p.m. An admission is charged.

Children's exercise classes planned at West End 'Y'

The West End YMCA is starting a new session of creative movement education for children. These include the Kermit the Frog exercise class for babies 3-12 months old and Cookie Monsters for children 1-5 years old.

The Kermit the Frog fitness class for infants will meet Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9 to 9:30. The Cookie Monster class for toddlers is offered on Tuesday and Thursday morning from 9:30 to 10 a.m. The Cookie Monster course teaches children to use their own creativity and imagination through movement by stimulating them both mentally and physically.

There is a fee for the class.

For more information call the West End YMCA, 215 W. C St., Ontario, at 986-5947. The West End YMCA is a United Way Agency.

Kite safety

Edison gives tips to children

Although windy, spring weather promises to bring plenty of fun for kite-flyers, certain safety tips should be observed, the Southern California Edison Co. has suggested.

The electric utility is distributing thousands of "Happy Days" with the Fonz" kite safety books, describing safety rules as well as tips on how to make a kite. The booklets are being given to youngsters in schools throughout Edison's service area, a utility spokesman said.

The key safety rule recommended by the Edison spokesman is that kites should not be flown near electric power lines, nor should they be retrieved if caught in power lines. "Kite-flyers could receive a severe electric shock," the spokesman warned.

As in previous kite-flying seasons, Edison — and now, "The Fonz" — remind kite buffs about the following guidelines for a happy kite season:

- Don't fly kites during stormy weather.
- Don't fly kites in the rain.
- Don't fly kites with metal in the frame or tail.
- Don't use tinsel, wire or twine with metal in it.
- Don't cross streets or highways while flying kites.
- Don't fly kites over TV, CB or radio antennas.
- Don't fly kites near electric power lines.
- Don't attempt to retrieve a kite should it become caught in electric power lines.

As "The Fonz" would say, "If you wanna be bright, if you wanna be right, follow these hints when you go fly your kite!"

Be ready to talk, listen, take doctor's advice

Patient must prepare for office visit

"A prepared patient comes to the doctor's office ready to talk, ready to listen, and ready to take advice," says Toni Propotnik, R.N. and president of the 17,000-member California Nurses Association (CNA).

Just as a doctor and nurse prepare for their patient, a patient should prepare for an office visit to assure the most beneficial outcome, according to CNA.

If a patient is ill, for example, writing down a list of symptoms before going to the doctor's office is a good idea. This way there is less chance of forgetting telltale symptoms that might assist in the doctor's diagnosis.

Such a list, and the resulting conversation between the patient and the nurse also enables the nurse to record pertinent facts for the doctor, prepare the patient for examination and conduct preliminary tests such as taking the patient's temperature or running a urinalysis, if warranted. This preparation gives the doctor vital background material when examining the patient and saves time and motion for all concerned, according to CNA.

If visiting a doctor for the first time, a prepared patient's list should also include known allergies and medication that he currently is taking. These two factors will play a part in determining which drugs might be used in treating the illness.

Eating and drinking habits should be noted too, since numerous medications can react adversely when combined with alcoholic beverages or certain foods, says the CNA.

Even when medication is not a factor, current eating habits are often an area that should be discussed during a visit to the doctor. With approximately one-half of the adult American population overweight, the patient might do well to ask about a sensible reducing plan.

Fad diets, for example, offer enormous appeal since they promise quick weight loss, but reducing weight should not mean eliminating important nutrients from the diet, says CNA. Most successful dieters stay healthy while shedding pounds by following a medically-prescribed diet based on the four food groups — milk, meat, vegetables and fruit, and breads and cereals.

In the case of the annual checkup — a practice endorsed by CNA — the patient in general good health can get more benefit from a visit to the doctor by volunteering information and asking questions of the nurse and doctor.

"The public is bombarded by literally hundreds of contradictory health claims in the course of a year," says Propotnik, "and the annual checkup is the perfect time to clear up doubts and confusion by asking the opinion of health professionals you know and trust."

"Whatever the questions, symptoms or worries, the most fruitful office visits are those in which the patient comes prepared to discuss them with the doctor or the nurse," adds Propotnik.

SAN DIEGO: MISSION BAY—LA MESA 72 STORES COAST TO COAST

New housing in Russia appears relatively drab when compared to bustling U.S. developments. At left, people living a new town project called Dubna stroll through a broad park-like center. New low- and high-rise apartment projects are also shown. There are few single-family homes in the Soviet Union.

Severe housing shortage evident in Soviet Union

By HERB LAWRENCE
Copley News Service

There are some housing headaches in this country — but nothing to compare with the ongoing severe housing pinch and other problems in the Soviet Union.

This becomes clear in a talk with Barry McComie, the head of a major development firm who was part of a U.S. delegation which toured Soviet housing developments recently.

McComie is president of Avco Community Developers, the firm which built the new communities of Rancho Bernardo and Laguna Niguel in Orange County.

The main target of the visit was the so-called Soviet "new towns."

"It's evident that Russia is still suffering from a severe housing shortage despite major building activity there," McComie said.

He said the Soviet housing built in its new towns isn't attractive and probably would repel most Americans.

The "standard" single-family housing that Americans are accustomed to is almost unknown in the Soviet Union.

People there mostly live in apartment houses, many of which are high-rises, and maintenance is poor.

McComie described "contemporary Soviet standards for housing as the mass development of high-rise structures all similar in design and in general of poor construction quality."

The new towns there are made up of concrete constructed high-rise apartments ranging in height from five to 20 stories, he said.

"The outside of the buildings look very sterile," he said. "There's no beauty in them."

About 100 square feet is allowed for each individual living in the apartment. That means a family of three will have 300 square feet.

McComie said normally there was a small kitchen, one bathroom and a couple of other rooms.

The high-rise new towns usually are built near an industrial center to house factory workers.

"Of course, the whole thing is planned by the government," he said. "The industrial base goes in, the housing goes up and the people are assigned to live there. They pay a percentage of their earnings as rent."

There were more appealing apartment buildings in some communities, he said, but that was probably because they were occupied by high-level scientific types who got better housing because of their positions.

He said Soviet officials who visited his Rancho Bernardo and Laguna Niguel developments thought planning for the sprawling, mostly single-family residential developments reflected inefficient use of the land.

"But I think they just weren't used to seeing American-type residential development where we have to make it comfortable and attractive to the buyers," he said.

In the Soviet Union there are no private housing developers, he said.

The government does all the building.

Although McComie said he didn't like much of what he saw, he did spot one technique used by the Soviet that could be applied here — their use of computer technology to plan new towns.

"This use makes planning much more sophisticated and scientific," he said. "I think that some of that same technology could be applied here."

But he emphasized that it could only be used for legitimate new towns where a whole new community with residential, commercial and industrial areas are planned.

He said several new towns set up with the aid of the federal government here have failed because of faulty planning.

"You have to have the right data on where the growth is going so you can put new towns in the right place," he said. "Also you have to plan adequate commercial and industrial development to go with residential areas."

He said that enough commercial and industrial development was planned to make Rancho Bernardo a viable community.

McComie believes that government and private interests should work together on computer planning on future new town projects.

The necessity of building

Real estate market turns sophisticated

Copley News Service

The marketing of real estate is becoming more complex and sophisticated with every passing year.

No longer can a friendly, neighborhood realtor tuck a few information pieces on favorite listings into his pocket and expect their personal distribution to be the primary thrust of his merchandising efforts.

Even a schedule of ads, mailings and phone calls to "shake the prospect bushes" isn't enough. The industry has progressed far beyond that point. Today's realtors must use modern technology and resources if they are to attain the status of professionals in the field of real estate marketing.

Most realtors now participate in a computerized Multiple Listing Service, which constantly updates their information on new and existing listings. Many offices are equipped with computer terminals, through which they have almost immediate access to special information on current property availabilities that can be prepared for individual clients.

In addition to local and regional multiple listing services, many realtors now actively participate in national and even international real estate marketing networks.

The largest international network is Previews, Inc. This long-established organization (formed in 1933) specializes in selling large one- or a-kind properties, requiring worldwide exposure.

Previews, a subsidiary of ExecuTrans, Inc., does not sell properties directly. This organization structures a worldwide marketing program for each property it promotes, then works through an international network of brokers to close sales.

In fact, about half of the listings in the Previews inventory were referred by independent realtors. The reason being that Previews has the capability and expertise to launch an international marketing program, while most realtors do not. Previews charges the property owner a marketing fee — over and above the broker's normal commission.

The fee is substantial. But so is the schedule of marketing activities. It includes such things as custom brochures, ads in international publications, publicity releases submitted to news media throughout the world, direct mail — anything it takes to find that one-in-a-million buyer.

A large proportion of properties marketed by Previews are very special and expensive homes. Often the buyer is from a country other than where the home is located.

Examples of two properties that sold just before Christmas: an airport in New Jersey and Peter Island in the British Virgin Islands. The island sold for a mere $7 million.

"We cover the entire spectrum of property types," Bruce Wennerstrom, Previews president, told this writer. "In many respects, we function as an international multiple listing service."

Previews is a prime example of the type of progressive organization that will play an increasing active role in the marketing of real estate in the future. In effect, it gives us a preview of things to come in the real estate market.

Q. What was the most active phase of real estate activity during 1978?

A. The most increasingly active phase of the market last year was probably the conversion of rental apartments to condominiums in metropolitan areas.

In Chicago, for example, conversions were primarily responsible for the "condo boom" experienced last year. Over half the for-sale market — 43,000 units — were condos.

An additional 25,000 condo units were sold in Chicago suburbs. In 1974, there were only 3,100 condo units,

Course teaches ways to cope with aggression

By JOHN M. BOGERT
Copley News Service
LOS ANGELES — Bruce Silmon's conversational tone was casual. He might as well have been talking about his job with the phone company, his college studies, or his six years of Aikido karate training.

Instead, he was talking about women; old, young, fat and thin women, training to jam fingers, elbows and knees savagely into the faces, stomachs and groins of would-be attackers.

"We took a below-par judo course and turned it into a common-sense lesson in self-defense," says Silmon about the subject he teaches at El Camino College.

Silmon and instructor Ron Sevier started the program two and one-half years ago in response, he says, to a world becoming increasingly hostile to defenseless people.

"Our course diverges from other self-defense courses in several ways," says the lithe 24-year-old martial arts teacher. "In karate you're taught movements without knowing their purposes."

"In judo, in an 18-week course like ours, you might learn five or six hip throws that might have no practical application.

"Here, we build dozens of different circumstances and teach 100 ways out of them. We grab women from behind and around the throat, pin them on the ground, then show them the way out."

Though the $14 physical education course is open to the public, male or female, many of the moves are designed especially for females.

"It's ridiculous for a woman to strike an attacker on the face with her fist. For one thing, a man might very well be used to being hit on the face. Further more, the hard facial bones will absorb the blow and serve to drive a woman's long fingernails into the palm of her own hand."

To cut into the odds stacked against the usually smaller woman, Silmon and company have devised scores of simple and fiendishly savage tactics to defend against what could be overwhelming odds.

"The outstanding aspect of this method is a person can discover what tactics best suit his or her own strengths."

Despite what they say, one can't help but sense the impending doom with 120-pound Kathy Gylfe is grabbed by 270-pound Luther Farris in a self-defense demonstration. The 18-year-old student seems to relax as the martial arts instructor straddles her, pinning both her wrists to the ground. Then, subtly, she slides her arms a foot to the left.

"It's like knocking one leg off a table," says the giant attacker, as he's pushed off balance and tumbles to the ground under his own weight. Once down, he's given a mock elbow to the groin by his victim.

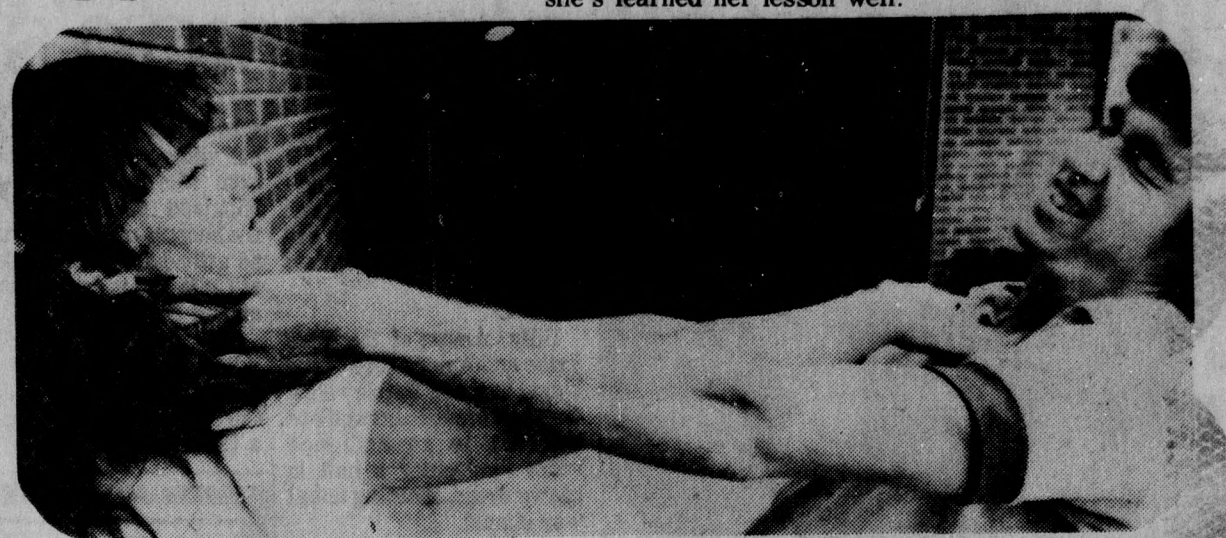

After brushing herself off, the blonde Gylfe says she took the course to build her confidence.

"Things are getting pretty crazy on the streets these days and I just wanted to have some confidence when I'm out there. On top of that, it's fun. I'm not Ms. Karate or anything. I just enjoy knowing I can defend myself."

"It's simple and basic," Silmon adds with a smile, "and it's already paying off."

"Five women have come back and told me what they learned here has helped them fend off attackers. We taught these women to meet aggression with aggression. It paid off. You can't ask for more than that."

A long finger-nailed throat punch, deftly delivered by Kathy Gylfe, convinces El Camino College self-defense instructor Bruce Silmon that she's learned her lesson well.

Two came to U.S. to help raise funds

Natives tell of mission's work

Amero Bire, left, and Billy Apupu of Papua-New Guinea, create instant interest when they appear before an audience shouting tribal war chants. They are touring the United States with the Rev. Stuart Merriam, who operates the Christian Highland Mission in their country.

By RITA GILLMON
Copley News Service
Most missionaries returning from the field to seek support bring native artifacts with them, but few bring people.

Billy Apupu of the Fore Tribe and Amero Bire of the Ungai Tribe in Papua - New Guinea create immediate interest in an audience when they enter a hall in native dress, shouting tribal war chants.

The tribes of Papua - New Guinea, according to the man who brought Apupu and Bire to the United States, the Rev. Stuart Merriam, gave up cannibalism as recently as 1962, and still war frequently among themselves. "They fight over pigs, women and land," he said. "Women were considered as property in the past, but that is changing."

Apupu and Bire can communicate with each other in English, the national language of Papua - New Guinea, and in a kind of trade - route pidgin English spoken in their part of the world, but neither one understands the other's tribal language.

There are 700 tribes in their country, and all have their own languages, so the government requires English to be taught in all the schools.

Papua - New Guinea comprises half of an island 1,500 miles long. The western half, Irian, belongs to Indonesia. The eastern half has an independent government modeled on the British parliamentary system and is part of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

"The country in the highlands was still in the Stone Age until recently, and that is a long distance for the people to have to travel in a hurry," Merriam said.

Bire hefted a stone ax during an interview, explaining that his father and grandfather still used them to cut down trees. He learned English at a mission school run by Lutherans at his village about 100 miles from Merriam's Christian Highland Mission. He did not become a Christian until he attended the high school at CHM and is now a leader among the students.

Bire hopes more of his countrymen will become Christians and is looking for a Christian wife.

Merriam estimates Bire's age at about 25.

Apupu is married and the father of a daughter born while he has been in the United States on a speaking tour.

He said many of his people still believe in evil spirits, which make them afraid. The death of a person usually prompts them to look for the one who "caused" the death, since germs and viruses are unknown to them.

"In 1975 my uncle died and my father asked me to do the magic to find out who killed him, but I wasn't able to do it," Apupu said.

Merriam speculates that Apupu's reluctance to see anyone killed caused him to lose a power that most men in his tribe seem to have.

"We are not trying to change their customs," said Merriam. "That was a colonial idea of the old days. The Gospel will bring about the changes it will."

Of the 2.5 million people in Papua - New Guinea, 98 percent are listed as Christian by the government, but Merriam said only a small percentage practice the religion.

"I think it is great that a government supports the faith," he said. About 66 percent of the schools in the country are operated by various Christian missions and Merriam said the government feels the need for education is great and that Christianity can serve as a unifying force in a divided country.

"We have no persecution, and in one area that is why the church is weak there," Merriam said.

Merriam is a former pastor of Broadway Presbyterian Church, across from Columbia University of New York City, but said he would never return to this life.

"I was on tour in 1963 when I first went to the area where the Fore Tribe is. They asked me to stay and teach them so there I am," he said.

Merriam said the native are no more superstitious than anyone else, but are superstitious about different things.

"I feel safer at the mission than I do in New York," he said.

Solicitation of funds gets sophisticated

By ROBERT P. STUDER

Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — With

the advent of the age of technology has come computerized mailing lists that can be programmed so exactly they can zero in on specific kinds of recipients with letters so convincingly personal they can fool you into thinking that a human being wrote them.

It's a great money - raising tool. It has awesome possibilities in the field of politics.

It also gives rise to an awesome potential for abuse. Vast sums of money can be raised this way, and sometimes not all of it gets to the source that the citizen - recipient or the corporate - recipient intended.

That is why, according to the chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Political Reform, the state must step in to protect not only the public but "the whole political process which has lost much credibility in recent years."

Sen. Omer L. Rains, D-Santa Barbara - Ventura, has introduced a political reform bill which he said is designed to correct "increasingly flagrant abuses in soliciting campaign contributions, especially through direct mail appeals. Those same techniques which have proved to be a great boon to candidates and issue - oriented groups," he said, "have also enabled unethical and fraudulent activities."

There was the fund appeal in 1976, he pointed out as an example, in which two Los Angeles men, using computerized contributor lists, raised more than $170,000 through misleading fund - raising appeals purporting to be raising money for the "Friends of Reagan," "Businessmen for Ford" and "Friends of Hayakawa."

"This pair," Rains said, "pocketed more than $81,000 of the money and only a fraction of it ever went to the candidates."

"What's more," Rains pointed out, "the solicitation was completely unauthorized and, indeed, the Hayakawa Campaign Committee took legal action to shut down the bogus 'Friends of Hayakawa' operation."

The pair, however, had succeeded in soliciting substantial contributions from such sophisticated political givers as a vice president of Fluor Corp., the chairman of both Standard Oil and Mobil Oil companies, a Los Angeles city councilman, the law firm of O'Melveny and Myers, the Shell Oil Employees' Political Action Committee, and from various executives of Carter - Hawley - Hale.

Union Bank, California First Bank and Ashland Oil Co.

"The so-called 'Friends of Hayakawa' effort, alone, took in contributions of nearly $55,000, but spent only $982 in actually promoting Hayakawa for the U.S. Senate," Rains said.

"And the rest of the funds went for what the promoters euphemistically called 'fund - raising commissions and fees.'"

"The operation was temporarily stopped when the Hayakawa campaign secured an injunction against the effort," Rains said, "but then the same promoters continued their operation under the guise of 'Businessmen for Ford.'"

Lucille Ball tells why we've got to keep Red Cross ready for big disasters.

A Public Service of This Newspaper
& The Advertising Council

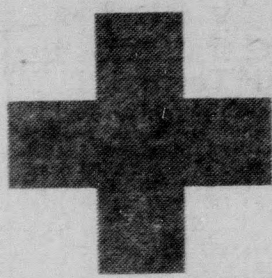

"When Clara Barton started American Red Cross back in the 1880's, its big job was to aid people during major disasters.

"Over the years, Red Cross has taken on lots of other jobs... jobs right around home. We see Red Cross helping the elderly and the homeless. Aiding veterans. Teaching life-saving - and health care. Collecting blood.

"But never forget that right along with all these important neighborhood jobs, Red Cross's vital national job has never changed.

"That's why Red Cross is there when there's a hurricane, a tornado, or other disaster, even when it's half a continent away.

"And that's why we've got to keep Red Cross ready... all over America."

Keep Red Cross ready.

There's
no business without show business.

When the curtain goes down for the evening, know what theatre-goers turn into?

Restaurant-goers. Taxi-riders. Shoppers.

Theatre-goers turn into consumers.

A lot of consumers. More people go to live theatre performances than to professional baseball, football, and basketball games combined.

On May 31, 1979 at 10:00 a.m. ONTARIO TITLE SERVICE, as duly appointed Trustee under and pursuant to Deed of Trust recorded May 11, 1978 in Book 9430, Page 969, of Official Records in the Office of the County Recorder of San Bernardino County, California, will sell at public auction to highest bidder for cash (payable at time of sale in lawful money of the United States) in the lobby of the Municipal Court Building of Rancho Cucamonga, located at 8075 Archibald Avenue, Rancho Cucamonga, California 91730, all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by it under said Deed of Trust in the property situated in said County and State described as:

Parcel No. 1: Lot 26, Tract No. 9882, as per plat recorded in Book 121 of Maps, Pages 59 through 62, inclusive, records of said County.

Parcel No. 2: Easements for bridge trails, ingress and egress over that portion delineated as "Bridle Trail Easements" on the map of Tract No. 9882, recorded in Book 121 of Maps, Pages 59 to 61, inclusive, records of said County.

The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 8996 Appaloosa Court, Rancho Cucamonga, California 91701.

The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown therein.

Said sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances to pay the remaining principal sum of the note secured by said Deed of Trust, to wit $43,100.00, with interest thereon, as provided in said note, advances, if any, under the terms of said Deed of Trust, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust.

The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written Declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the County where the real property is located.

Coaster rolls on the best, ready to ride Colossus

By JAMES BRONSON

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Mike Danshaw has been coasting through life since he was 8. Danshaw, 24, of Cliffside, N.J., rides roller coasters for a hobby. But that's an understatement. He lives for the grease, clatter, sudden drops and breakneck spins.

Name a brutal coaster, a national terror, one that even makes professional thrill-seekers grimace, and he's probably ridden it. A hundred times.

Of course, Danshaw's not in the same league yet as the premier roller coaster authorities, Robert Cartnell and Gary Kyriazi, who have written books on roller coasters and amusement parks. But he's climbing.

"I've visited just about every state and rode lots of roller coasters," Danshaw says. "I film them or take snapshots of them, walk around them and stand on them if the park allows me to."

"Some parks I go to, the operators take me underground to the motor room and show me how the things run."

"I keep a roller coaster fact sheet that has the height, length, how many tons of wood or metal it took to make it, how many gallons of paint to paint it, when it was built and so on."

Danshaw came to Southern California for one big reason: the Colossus at Magic Mountain.

But he won't get the chance to ride it because a Los Angeles woman fell to her death Dec. 26 while riding the monstrosity.

Park officials have closed the ride indefinitely, until they are convinced it's safe enough to reopen.

Danshaw, who has his own top-10 list of the most thrilling coasters in the nation, did go to Magic Mountain and take a look at the Colossus.

"I think it might jump up to my No. 1 or No. 2 spot from the way it looks," he says.

Danshaw estimates there are more than 200 roller coasters in the country and that less than half of them are wooden.

"To coaster enthusiasts, a wooden roller coaster is the best. It gives a much better ride, it seems to tilt with you when you hit the turns and the ride is not as smooth as the metal ones."

Danshaw says the Screaming Eagle, a metal coaster at Six Flags Over Mid-America in Missouri, is overrated.

"It is very smooth, goes out and back quickly, but I nearly fell asleep on it."

Danshaw attended a coaster enthusiasts' convention last year in Sandusky, Ohio, and helped form the American Coaster Enthusiasts Club. He is the publicity chairman for the new group.

He says family amusement parks, such as Six Flags and Disneyland, are replacing the old traditional parks like old Coney Island in New York. And, he says, the days of the traditional roller coaster are numbered.

"I got hooked when I was 8 years old and rode a roller coaster at Palisades Park with the man my sister was dating at the time."

During his stay here, Danshaw has spent long hours in libraries looking up old photographs and clippings on area coasters that once stood, including the Lightning Racer of Redondo Beach, torn down 40 years ago.

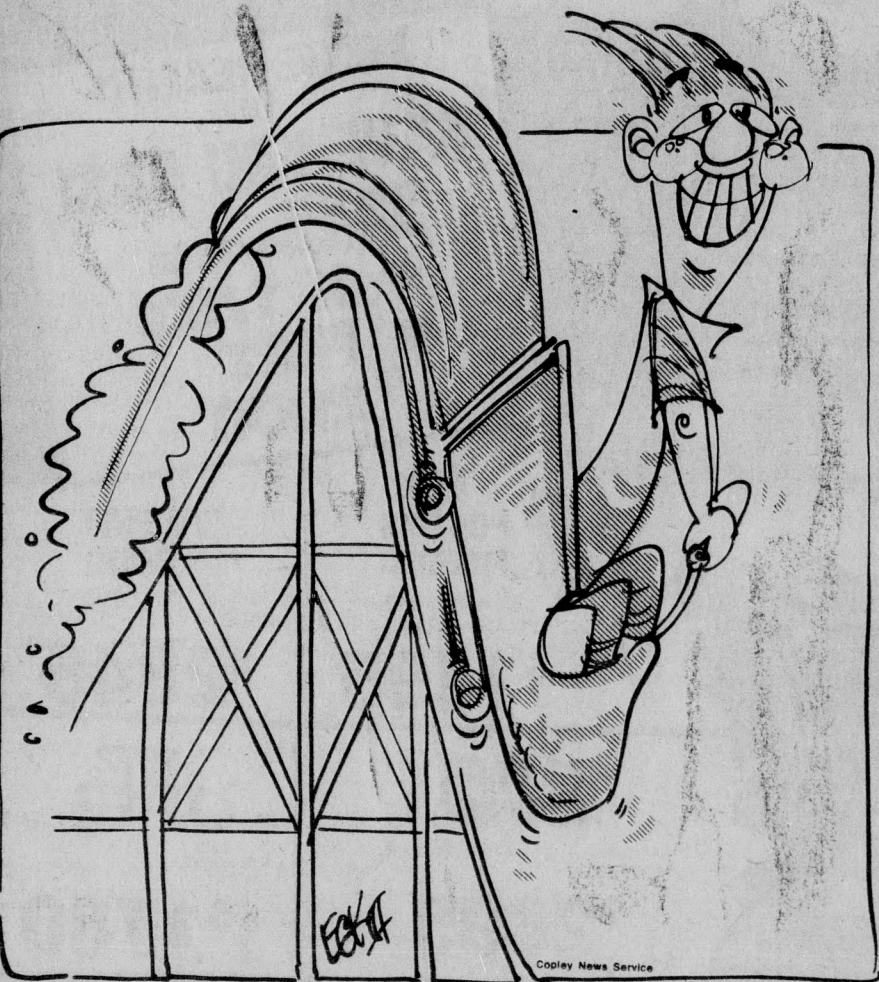

"They used to have one in Santa Monica and Venice and I would look them up, but I don't have the time."

Danshaw visited Belmont Amusement Park in San Diego and took pictures of the old roller coaster which is no longer in operation.

He also visited Santa Cruz and rode the Giant Dip.

"It's only 86 feet high but has lots of good turns. It's very fast and has nice drops. I think I might make it my No. 3 or No. 4 because it never gives up from the time it leaves the station and comes back."

"A coaster doesn't have to be big to be good."

Are go-go years ending?

Low productivity marks '79-80 legislative start

By OTTO KREISHER

Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — The state Senate recently used up a good part of a short floor session to adopt a rule change that would require "appropriate attire" for those persons privileged to come onto the Senate floor.

It was a question of maintaining "dignity" and "decorum," said Senate President Pro Tem James Mills, D-San Diego.

A short time later, in the midst of an almost equally short Assembly floor session, the 23 freshmen members stood up and plopped green and gold beanies on their heads as their spokesman introduced them as "the Bad News Bears of '79."

"Glad to have you here, as if we had any choice," Speaker Pro Tem John Knox, D - Richmond, grumbled from the podium. Those two events seem typical of what has been an unusually aimless and unproductive opening of a new legislative session.

If the trend continues, it could signal a watershed year, marking the end to the high - spending go-go years of California government.

Veteran legislators, lobbyists and Capitol reporters all agree the beginning of the 1979-80 session is different. But there is some difference of opinion as to whether this is a permanent change or merely a temporary phenomenon.

The Legislature thus far has been marked by four general characteristics:

— It is far more conservative in regard to spending and taxation than those or recent years.

— It has been unduly preoccupied with minutiae and issues largely extraneous to the problems facing California.

— The working relationship between the governor and the Legislature is probably the worst since the battles between former Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh and Pat Brown.

— The level of competing political ambitions is unusually high.

The conservative flavor of the new session is unquestionably the result of the sweeping voter approval last June of Proposition 13. Although the Assembly Democratic leadership insists — with some justification — that it has been holding down spending for at least two years, the enthusiasm for cost cutting is much greater this year.

A major element in the conservative wave is the large number of first - term legislators elected, they believe, on a Proposition 13 - inspired mandate to reduce government growth. They are reinforced by veteran legislators who either survived last year's elections by embracing the taxpayers' revolt or are looking ahead nervously to next year's contests.

The freshmen influence is particularly noted in the Assembly, where they make up more than one - fourth of the membership.

With few exceptions, the 23 first - termers are dedicated to reducing not only government spending, but all aspects of government intrusion in people's lives.

The freshmen have been unusually unified and uncommonly ready to challenge their more veteran colleagues and the leadership.

One veteran Republican assemblyman reportedly said that there is little difference between fear and respect, and it could be the veterans have not instilled any fear in the newcomers.

Assembly GOP Leader Paul Priolo, R-Malibu, said he did not know if the independent action by the freshmen was due to "a permissive attitude" by

Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, or "a matter of these freshmen saying, 'we hear a different drum beat than the veterans.'"

Perhaps one of the clearest examples of how different the first - term legislators are is in the number of bills they have introduced.

It has been common for many years for a freshman to come into the Legislature with drive to change the world with a lengthy list of proposed laws.

This year it is different. Although the bill introductions are running a bit higher than last year, according to Assembly Clerk James Driscoll, it is not because of the freshmen. As of the end of February, the veterans in the Assembly were averaging 11 pieces of legislation and the freshmen were averaging 3.5. In the Senate, the veterans had an average of 14 while the first - termers had an average of only four measures each.

The freshmen attitude was clearly shown in the Assembly floor vote on a proposed rule change by Assemblyman Mike Gage, D-Napa, which would restrict each legislator to introducing 40 measures during a two - year session. Although almost all of the most senior Assembly members argue strongly against the rule, 21 of the 23 freshmen voted for it.

During debate on the bill limitation, one of the freshmen said the message he received from his constituents was "we don't want any more laws, we want less government."

The freshmen pressure on the leadership is being most strongly felt in the Assembly GOP Caucus, where the first - year members constitute 16 of the 30. At the insistence of the freshmen, Caucus Chairman Bruce Nestande, R - Orange, had the Rules Committee put the Republicans in a solid block of seats on the floor.

Soon afterwards, the Republicans used their new strength to block an urgency bill by Assemblywoman Maxine Waters, D-Los Angeles, that would have extended permission for local schools to employ a group of classroom aides. The bill was held up until Waters amended it to apply only to the current school year.

Apparently angered by that and other early signs of increased partisanship by the Republicans, McCarthy called a quick caucus of the whole Assembly behind closed doors and had the seating arrangement changed to disperse the Republicans around the floor.

The added GOP strength is another key factor in the different way the Legislature is operating this year. The Republicans have the votes in both houses to block any measure requiring a two - thirds vote. These include urgency legislation, tax increases and spending measures, including the budget.

This is a familiar condition in the Senate, which tends to operate less on partisan lines, but it has required McCarthy to increase his efforts to involve the GOP leadership early and often in charting the course of major legislation.

His attitude, McCarthy said, "has to do with how you put the 54 votes

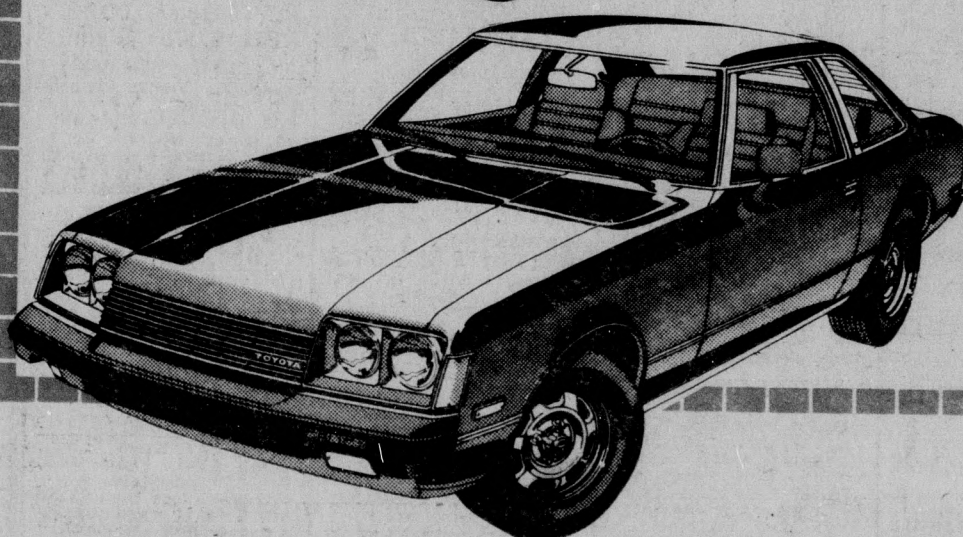

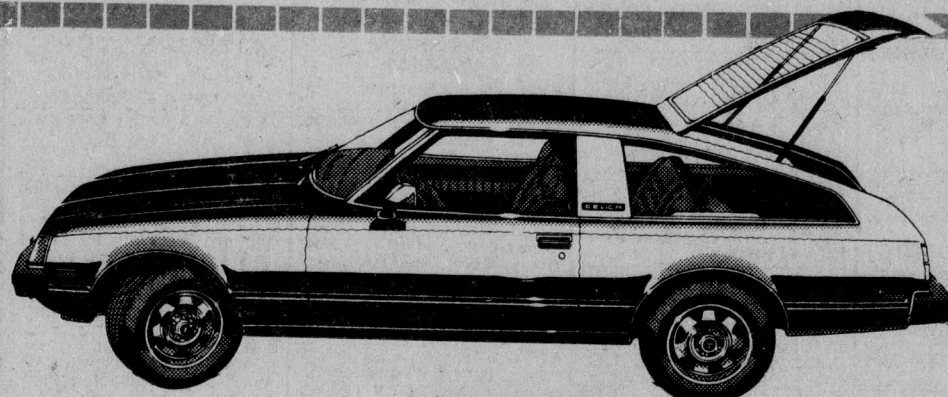

Assembly GOP leader Priolo and Senate Minority Leader William Campbell, R - Hacienda Heights, are convinced that the conservative trend will persist throughout the session, but the Democratic leadership almost unanimously said it is too early to tell how the new members will shape up because they have not had to vote on any of the substantive issues.
